Miss Marple's guide to Decency and Propriety in relations of the Gentleman to his Lady

Meeting the lady:

When you meet a lady, do always introduce yourself with a bow and act honoured. Do not leave her to make the first move. Remember! You do not know a person if you have not been introduced to the person, and you are not allowed to speak!

When you are asked to feel comfortable in the house of the persons you visit do not take it literally, as they are only polite. And do not use the toilet when visiting other people, a gentleman do not go to the toilet!

Engagement and marriage:

A gentleman and a lady should, of course, not sleep in the same room when they are only engaged, and never be left alone.

And remember, it is not appropriate for you to buy her underwear before the wedding.

Good etiquette:

Ask her about herself. People's favourite subject is them self. Look interested, although you are not.

Do not ever let the lady pay anything. When dining do not use your napkin, it is there as a fashion accessory, not as a napkin. If you get it dirty, you are doing something wrong. And do not fold it in any way, as it will look like you have used it and that is the worst thing you can do!

Make the evening his. Never complain if he comes home late or goes out to dinner, or other places of entertainment without you. Instead, try to understand his world of strain and pressure and his very real need to be at home and relax.

A good wife always knows her place! A marriage has nothing to do with love. Your choice shall be informed by a sincere dedication to establishing a respectable household. Thus you shall be engaged with a female of the appropriate kin. You shall not dare initiate physical contact before the conclusion of the nuptial day.

The only and obvious purpose of physical contact is the improvement of the demography of the glorious nation of Britannia. Our army is waiting for young stout men! You shall not take delight in the process; instead approach it as a heavy and responsible duty!

If you do not wish to abide by the rules above, the only solution is to visit the Docks where one actually might find contact with local harlots.

However, beware of the diseases that such an act may bring along!

Sick Scientist Set in Slammer

Better Times - Two Lovebirds in Baker Street.

In a spectacular show of unexpected competence the London Police yesterday succeeded in laying hands on Sir William Higglebottom, the key character in the linked mysteries of the kidnapping of H.M. Queen Victoria and disappearance of star investigator Mr. Sherlock Holmes.

After only two days of doodling around, Inspector Lestrade hit on the brilliant idea of seeking out Sir William in his laboratory, and arresting him. For good measure, he brought the lowest ranking officer of his police force. This peculiar character has set a new record for having been passed over for promotion for an astonishing 20 years of active duty. Considering the habit of our police force to promote even the most obviously incompetent dilettante to "Super-Overconstable" or some such impressive rank, Constable Brown's is a singular achievement of ineptitude. Brown has also been seen at Marxist "power-to-the-people" rallies and his loyalty to the monarchic system of our beloved country is dubious at best. The third and final member of the posse who set out to arrest Sir William was Dr. John Watson, Mr. Holmes' amateurish assistant. Watson is generally described as a harmless buffoon of acceptable manners, so at least he could not make matters worse.

William Higglebottom offered no resistance to the arrest, but his lover

Ms Jane Marple, a wannabe-investigator with stunning looks, a sharp tongue and the terminal flaw of being a woman, assaulted the dynamic trio of our police. After a mere half an hour, London's finest had subdued the raging beauty, given her a good spanking, and whisked Higglebottom off to jail.

The scientist is now facing charges of Perversion, Causing Public Outrage, Violation of Laboratory Safety Standards, and playing a yet unspecified role in the abduction of his alleged mother, Queen Victoria. Sir Henry Higglebottom, the Mayor of London, has commented: "He is no son of mine any more. Cavorting with sheep and women-detectives is below the family honour of the Higglebottoms."

Finnish Happiness!

...and we wonder what makes them so happy :D

Horoscopes

GEMINI

As IMwe approaches its end, you grow more restless each day. Although you might not have accomplished as much as you planned, there are still two days left. At least make sure there's one person who remembers your name. Apart from your murderer.

ARIES

Got wool stuck between your teeth? Had some fun with Dolly again? Naughty, naughty! The stars don't mind, but you might irritate your roommates. Lucky you feel as energetic as a frog caught in an electric fence. Don't worry, a farmer with a pitchfork is on its way.

TAURUS

Remember: By all means, marry. If you get a good wife, you'll become happy; if you get a bad one, you'll become a philosopher. This little proverb may not seem very relevant or applicable at the moment, but we are sure that you will be thankful for this piece of advice as soon as you have gathered some life experience.

SCORPIO

You see from the sky that your #%#(#@ is very big. Get some help before it's too late. If nobody wants to relieve your urges, ask for some ice packs in the kitchen and put them on your #%#(#@. Wicked!

LEO

You should not have woken up today. Really. The average number of hours spent sleeping per night is decreasing day by day. Just pull yourself together and make sure you're the last one standing at the end of the week. Easter walk is not for you.

CANCER

Somebody is trying to lure you into a pot of boiling hot water. Don't go for it. Instead, try to concentrate on the preposterous aims you have set for yourself today. In the long run, you will end up as a red lobster anyway. With a slice of lemon stuck between each of your claws.

Laura and Valentin proudly present:

How to CURE YOUR IMWE-BLUES

Those who are "IMWe-experienced" know that after the tremendous emotion-trip that IMWe is you come home and reality hits you big time. No crazy Croatians, no Keiler, no banging Big Ben, no notorious newspaper, no table-soccer, no making out in the tower, no massage IG, no alternative meditation, no Danish chocolate-making, no Sea-monster, no castle to get totally lost in and fuck, no dreamtime!

Not to worry. Although the only real cure for IMWe is the IMWe next year, London Times will now offer some little tips how to ease your IMWe blues:

* While at work or class, sneak online and visit one of the homepages that offer IMWe-pictures. Look at them all. Twice. When your boss/teacher ask you a question you can't answer (because you were currently looking at a picture of Lars frolicking around in women's clothes) just answer with the phrase "Why are you prancing around like you have laser eyes?" (-and remember to add the ze German accent).

* Buy as much of Keiler in the kiosk as you possibly can and stuff it into your backpack. When you've got home take a bath, pore a deciliter of Keiler in there just to get the overall Dungeon-smell and then drink the rest.

* Hitchhike your way around Europe going from couch to couch in the inviting houses of IMWeans.

* Find a meadow to lie on and listen to Vår on repeat in your mp3 player.

* Improve your English/mood/inefficiency by loitering away your afternoons chatting with friends on Skype/MSN/ICQ.

* Order some shark from Iceland.

* Re-read all the issues of the newspapers that you surely kept in perfect condition.

* Subscribe to the Ryan Air newsletter and whenever there's a one-euro flight to which ever country you know an IMWean from, just pack the little bag you got from the Austrian during the international evening and get your arse over there. Gossip through a night and a half, drinking the local booze and sharing memories.

- 463 songs with guitar chords, including most "Dungeon-hits" is still available for musiclovers by Jostein/Newspaperboy for up to, including and no more than 12 Euro.

Horoscope continued.

AQUARIUS

Finally it has happened. The water has turned into wine. Parts of it though do taste like Keiler, but you realize that you actually don't mind that much. Just grab a mermaid and get it on! However, remember that you can never know the waters she has roamed before.

(EX-)VIRGO

Our Chief Astronomers have found out that the stars' constellations render you under the influence of Venus (not the one you shave your legs with). That means that you have to be a man-hunting harlot today. Just lie back and think of England.

CAPRICORN

Woke up in the Dungeons? A headache of unbelievable intensity is pulsing through your skull and your muscles feel as if you've been massaged by a battle tank? Now is the time to take a hot bath, eat some strawberries with cream and spend the whole day relaxing in front of the TV. Oh! We just remembered that you don't have these things here! The stars laugh at your misery.

LIBRA

It would be quite an exaggeration to claim you were in high spirits today. Nevertheless, you keep prancing around like you have laser eyes. That's a big improvement to yesterday's disastrous condition. And remember: your neighbour's grass looks always greener.

PISCES

Fantasizing about the queen again? Please do remember that there's more than just one fish in the sea. Like a tuna fishing fleet speeding through a school of dolphins, you will be greatly rewarded. And remember that you need to bait the hook to catch the fish. Or zou just use a hand grenade.

SAGGITARIUS

Just as you spotted a nice tasty deer and prepared to release the arrow, your bow snapped and broke in half. Now being a sexual invalid, there's nothing left for you to do; in fact, you might as well pack your things and leave today.
